- Junior is the speaker
- Junior expresses his frustration with reservation life
- Junior feels that his community only knows how to lose valuable things necessary for life and because of that, life on the reservation seems pointless.

Complete Summary

In the following quote, Junior is expressing his frustration with his life on the reservation. Junior feels that reservation life sets up those who live there for a life of failure and loss, and that the constant losing of valuable things necessary for a successful life makes living on the reservation seem sad and pointless, with little opportunity to have a worthwhile life.

Follow the example above to correctly summarize the evidence you are using to support your persuasive arguments on how Rick Snyder and his government officials' actions were oppressive and a result of their implicit biases. Offer solutions so that he can right the wrong he has done in Flint.

Citation-with context, intro to evidence, and citation

In the article by the Detroit Free Press titled Flint residents paid America's highest water rates, John Wisely found that the citizens of Flint were paying much more for their toxic water than residents in other cities in Michigan with clean water. Wisely researched that, "A survey of the 500 largest water systems in the country, concluded last year, found that on average, Flint residents paid about $864 a year for water service, nearly double the national average and about three-and-a-half times as much as Detroiters pay."
