

Apostrophe Practice

Dan and Lisa Smith have two beautiful children. Amy is nine and Ross is seven.

Lisa and Dan's house
The house of Lisa and Dan has two floors. The rooms of the children are upstairs, and the bedroom of the parents is downstairs. The room of Lisa is always clean while the room of Ross is always messy. The schedule of the family are very busy this week. The sports teams of Ross all have games, the ballet class of Amy has a recital, and the car of Dan is in the shop, so the Smith family members are trying to get everything done with only the car of Lisa. So far today, they have been to school, practice, rehearsal, the grocery store and the office of the veterinarian, and they are not finished yet.

At the office of the veterinarian, there were two dogs. Lisa and Dan laughed when both of the leashes of the dogs got tangled, and the owners of the dogs fell to the ground. Amy and Ross also got to pet three kittens. The fur of the kittens were grey and white, that looked like little overgrown mice. The kittens had a toy that they were all playing with. When they were playing in the waiting room of the office of the veterinarian, the toy of the kittens rolled under a piece of furniture. The fingers of Amy were long enough to reach the toy out from underneath the furniture, allowing the Smith family to finally return home after a busy day.
